cause, he was a red-Hotspur. He fought from the beginning to the end of the war and fought bravely and well. He gained with very marked emphasis to a committee with which he was holding an interview, various successes. He was watchful, skill-ful, energetic and persevering. Probably no Confederate officer of his grade made a better fame than he. His was a name that the South loved to speak. She celebrated it in song. Her daughters sang it, and her sons shouted it.

The war closed. The South laid down her arms upon certain well understood conditions. It was right and proper that all the Southern men, whether they had served doubted that Gen. Grant, as President, her arms upon certain well understood con-ditions. It was right and proper that all the Southern mea, whether they had served in the Confederate armies or not, should abide by the conditions in letter and in spirit. But the Federal Government did not abide by them either in letter or in Farmers in the vicinity of Horse Cave spirit. But the Federal Government did not abide by them either in letter or in spirit. Hard and oppressive terms, terms previously unthought of and unheard of in any section, were laid by Congress upon the South, Unreasonable, unjust, and even insulting compliances were demanded of her. She was required to vote her own degradation in various ways and notified that she would be held subject to white and the country simply as General Grant's Chiefshe would be held subject to white and black military rule until she should do so and to white and black civil rule after she should have done so. FRANKFORT, March 15, 1869. (Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.)
FRANKFORT, March 15, 1859.
GEN. BRECKINRIDGE'S VISIT TO FRANKFORT—
A SKERMADE AND A SPEECH.
Gen. John C. Breckinridge was screenaded on Saturday night, at the residence of Col. Stoddard Johnston, by members of the Legislaiure and citizens, irrespective of party. No public notice had been given of any intended demonstration, but I do not think I oxaggrate when I say that there were more than a thousand persons present at the screenade. The utmost enthusiasm prevailed. Before the band commenced playing bondres were lighted by the people before the residence where the General was an honored guest that they might see as clearly as possible the noble features of Kentucky's favorite son. As the music of the band swelled on the night air its notes were miggled with loud cries for the General. Averse as he is known to be to formal demonstrations, Gen. Breckinridge could not refuse to respond to such a call from his old friends the Louisville Medic-chirurgical Society. Seetenman.

Mr. Turner proposed that the number of agents be four, and one of them a Frenchman. Adopted, and then Mr. Standiford's amendment, as amended, was adopted. Pending the consideration of this question the hour for adjournment arrived, and the Senate adjourned until ten o'clock Mon-Monday, March 15, 1893.

The Senate was called to order by Mr. Speaker Johnson at the usual hour, and the journal was strations, Gen. Breckinridge could not refuse to respond to such a call from his old friends and fellow-citizens; and at length his tall and commanding form and noble countennee, looking, as your correspondent thought, atmost as youthful and far more majestic than when he knew him twelve years ago, were seen in the doorway. Then at once, as imultaneous shout of welcome arose from the people. Many eyes, among them those of the speaker, glistened with sympathetic moisture as, with a voice at first tremulons, but soon ringing out in the tones so well remembered, John C. Breckinridge made his acknowledgement in brief and elequent terms. Both before and after the seronade a great many persons, among whom were distinguished members of the Radical jarty, paid their respects to the distinguished visitor. Below will be found General Breckinridge's remarks, taken down by the Couplest-Journal's phonographic reporter:

HRSPONBIBLITY OF MALIROADS.

It will be remembered that a bill making the railroad companies of the State responsible for stock destroyed passed the Sonate a short timesince. The bill this morning came before the House of Representatives for consideration, and was concurred in by that body. This is a law of no small interest allke to railroad companies and those living along the routes of the railroads.

MOBILE AND OBIO BAILROAD.

The bill relieving the Mobile and Ohio Railroad from taxtion since 1857 was lost in the House to-day. There was no quorum voting, and the vote as it stood was a tic.

LEGISLATIVE AFFIOFRIATIONS.

A bill passed the House to-day authorizing the Governor to borrow an amount, not exceeding $500,000, from the Sinking Fund, in order to meet the appropriations made by the Legislature.

A good deal of discussion took place in the Senate on Saturday night over a proposition to authorize the Governor to appoint a sort to authorize the Governor to appoint a sort of roving European immigration agent or commissioner, without a salary, and to be dependent upon the sale of Kentacky lands, &c., for compensation. The bill was drawn up by a Scotch gentleman, and was, I thought, plainly intended for his bouefit. Its passage was resisted by Messrs. Cooke, Standiford, and others, and the last named Senator succeeded in getting it so amended as to provide for the appointment of one German, one Irishman, and one Frenchman, in addition to one Scotchman. The subject had not been finally disposed of at the hour of adjournment.

I know nothing of Mr. Davis' wishes or intentions on the subject, but it affords me pleasure to teatify to his usefulness as a legislator. These incidents, however, are trivial compared with the delay occasioned to the spring trade, the damage to fruits, etc. We are glad, however, to be able to chronicle a fair business in the general markets, and in some departments of trade a rush is reported.

The provision market is arousing from the apathy which has for several weeks distinguished it. A better demand is reported, and prices, particularly of bacen, are advancing. The confidence of operators is strengthened, and the general opinion is that prices will continue to rule high. Messrs. Kerchival & Son, of St. Louis, in their dreadar of Saturday say:

any such practice very soon here; but if it is begun in the South and becomes general there, it ill necessarily soon spread to New York, and of any of the New York, and of anothing greenbacks at a discount instead of gold at a practium. Gold would soon become the money of account. Prices would be on a succiousis, and all financial operations would be simply. The 10 A. N.
